

All-Out Drive Sought to Get University for Victoria

By HARRY YOUNG

An approach to the provincial government to provide Victoria with a university of its own in the immediate future is recommended by the Chamber of Commerce university sub-committee. made during the past six months the committee last week decided to recommend that the directors of the chamber should urge the government to provide the means to establish a university.

The suggested resolution to the cabinet calls for a university with a campus capable of serving a student-body of approximately 9,500, offering at least a four years liberal arts course.

The resolution also asks the government to acquire adequate property in addition to that already secured for Victoria College to allow the construction of a compact, desirable campus.

Captain Ron Newell, chairman of the sub-committee will present the recommendation to the next meeting of the chamber of commerce directors.

Reasons for its action given by the sub-committee are based on the eminent suitability of Victoria as a university city, and the desirability of having higher educational facilities at the seat of government.

The sub-committee says the population of Victoria and Vancouver Island is expected to be doubled in the next 12 to 20 years. They say the presence of a university on the Island would encourage many Island parents to provide their children with higher education that might otherwise be prohibitive on account of costs.

It also expressed the view that with UBC population now in the region of 8,000, and growing rapidly, the time had come for some form of decentralization.

Records show that some of the world's finest universities—

namely Oxford, Cambridge and Harvard—had comparatively small student bodies.

The committee, on examining evidence submitted to it, decided there was grave danger when a university grew too large, students were unable to receive the individual attention that was necessary in a full university life.

Because of its provincial library—one of the finest of its kind—its cultural activities and the favorable atmosphere for young people, Victoria was held to be an ideal spot for the creation of a second university.

The resolution is also to be placed before the next meeting of the Victoria district executive council of the PTA, seeking

Facts Coming

Schools: A Field Of Thorns

BY R. O. MARRION

(First of a Series)

The field of education in British Columbia today is a field full of thorns. It almost always has been. But some of today's thorns seem bigger and sharper, and some are new.

This article is the first in a series surveying the field, thorns most of all.

But the series will not pretend or presume to recommend ways of overcoming them; at most, it will suggest that some ideas appear to have merit over others.

FACTS, PROBLEMS

Its prime purpose is to set forth the facts and problems of education in B.C. in as orderly a manner as possible so that parents and taxpayers can decide more easily where they stand.

The first group of articles will tell how much we are paying for education; the second, what we are getting for our money.

The second group is written chiefly in terms of criticism of the system and its products, and answers to that criticism such as they may be in each case.

UP TO READER

A third group of articles will describe how the cost is shared and, while providing the arguments on all sides, will leave to the reader the final judgment on how fairly it is shared.

A brief fourth and last group of articles will indicate how much voice the people of B.C. have in education, and will present arguments on whether or not local control is worth the price communities must pay for it at present.

The writer does not hold himself qualified more than any other "man in the street" to sit in judgment of today's education. But it is pertinent to record that as he delved for facts, figures and opinions, many of his preconceived ideas about education in B.C. changed.

It is pertinent because other men in the street have preconceptions and prejudices too, and probably would have had some of them changed in making a study of this kind.

CLEAR COVERS

That, if anything, gives this series value. If the articles do not result in unanimity of thought, and it is extremely unlikely that they will, they may at least clear away some cobwebs and stimulate thinking; they may even evoke new ideas for the solution of B.C.'s education problems.

The job of digging out information and interviewing people for this series was started several weeks ago in the unhappy knowledge that the writer was not a royal commission with power to subpoena

Movie Chimp Slain

CYPRESS, Calif. (CP) — Cheetah the chimpanzee, scene-stealing veteran of dozens of movie and television films, was shot to death yesterday after he went berserk and attacked his owner.

The 11-year-old chimp, whose acting career, covered almost nine years, was brought to the Cypress ranch of his owner, Ed Rogers, some 50 miles from Los Angeles, after becoming ill.

Apparently wracked with pain, the frenzied animal broke out of his cage and escaped. Rogers, with the help of sheriff's deputies, succeeded in roping Cheetah but was bitten in an unsuccessful struggle to subdue the animal.

When the beast broke loose once again and started lumbering toward a group of youngsters who had gathered to watch, the deputies cut loose with several shotgun blasts and killed him.

MONTRÉAL (CP) — Police Chief Charles St. Amour of suburban Montreal North and one of his detectives were arrested early today in a raid by their own colleagues on an alleged gambling establishment.

Chief St. Amour and Detective Arthur Jobin were released on $50 bail each pending arraignment next Tuesday on gambling charges.

Leo Blondin, chairman of the Montreal North police commission, said three other men were found with the two policemen in the basement of a pool hall in the suburb. The three other men also were released on bail.

The raiding party was led by Lieut. Charles Ares and accompanied by Mr. Blondin and Lucien Brodeur, mayor of Montreal North.

'We Want Mike' Chant Thundered By Young Liberals

Organize, Pearson Advises

PRESQU'ILE, Ont. (CP) — The Young Liberals of Ontario left no doubt Saturday night that they strongly favor Lester B. Pearson for the national Liberal Party leadership.

"We want Mike, we want Mike," the association's delegates chanted as the former external affairs minister began the closing speech of the two-day conference.

STANDING OVATION

They stood and cheered him as he began to speak and gave him another standing ovation after his hour-long address. He called for reorganization and re-strengthening of the federal party and linking it closer to provincial organizations.

Paying tribute to retiring chieftain Louis St. Laurent, Mr. Pearson said Canada and the party is losing a great leader and a great friend. Whatever Mr. St. Laurent plans for the future, "he will remain the elder statesman of the Liberal party."

CRITICIZED TORONTO

In his address, Mr. Pearson criticized the Progressive Conservatives for not sending an elected representative to the United Nations debate on Hungary. He charged them with clothing programs initiated by the Liberals with their own garments and expensive clothes.

The Liberals on the other hand have been weak in putting their ideas across to the public. The party will have to work hard to obtain more young recruits and retain them by giving them a chance to originate ideas and influence policies.

MUST BE DONE

He said the principles of Liberalism have to be applied in a way which would obtain practical solutions for Canada's current problems.

Mr. Pearson said "this must be done, and done soon so that the people of this country will know where we stand."

Flood Gets Worse

SQUAMISH (CP) — Rain began falling again Saturday over the flooded Squamish Valley.

Floodwaters were 14 feet deep in some places following torrential rains Thursday night and early Friday which swelled the Squamish River, causing it to burst its banks.

Construction workers were being flown out by helicopter Saturday after spending nearly two days marooned at a B.C. Electric powerhouse at Cheakamus, which was damaged by swirling floodwaters.

The only road through the valley was cut off and homes were flooded. A $35,000 helicopter was swamped before it could be moved from its landing site.

About 20 men were stranded at the site as the water roared by.

A crew of about another 20 men building a road were forced to seek refuge at a hillside camp. They were also being brought out by helicopter.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

(Reprinted from Sept. 19, 1956)

THERE are many pleasures to light a dark world in the autumn. For instance:

A tree full of small birds exploding into flight. The honk of wild geese.

The shiny face of a chestnut, broken from its husk. Boys gather the nuts to play with. A grown man furtively hides a chestnut in his pocket and examines it when he thinks nobody is looking. The nut is a talisman of boyhood. Its pure, high gloss, like the bowl of a new pipe, soon fades to a dry, tough brown.

The smell of apples and leaf-smoke. Yellow, brown and tired green foliage reflected in a lake, until a wind smashes the mirror and sends the leaves flying.

The comfortable look of a black cat which has already left its favorite place in the bushes and taken up its winter position, curled in a tight, slick bundle on the sofa.

The squeak of a rural mailbox, as the carrier swings it on its rusty pivot. What's in the box today? A parcel from grandmother? Letters, papers, bills, invitations to borrow money at ruinous rates? Maybe (if this is a lucky month) some cheques in brighter colors than the autumn leaves.

The pale warmth of sunshine at noon. Surprise visits from friends, making a good excuse to stop work.

A jet plane out of sight, spinning an arch of vapor on a blue sky. Another plane whizzing along at an angle to the first, until their trails link in a hollow cross. The pattern of machine-made clouds could mean hope, or else fire and death, the autumn of the world.

witnesses and all the time in the world to make a report that might be mercifully pigeon-holed, and that as a result he might be open to accusations of superficiality.

On the other hand, unlike a royal commission, he could extend the blessing of anonymity at will, to parents for the sake of their children, to teachers and officials for the sake of their careers.

When he embarked on the study, he could not have been more convinced that taxation of property was an unfair and inequitable way of raising money for education.

But now he thinks it is fair enough, although not as fair as income tax would be, and although it does handicap municipalities (at its present level) in the provision of other services as long as they try to keep their mill-rates down.

When he started out, he had the idea that teaching of non-essential subjects in Greater Victoria schools was not only costing the taxpayers a lot of money, but was diverting pupils from more fundamental studies.

Now he believes that the district's one big "frill"—a good teaching staff—reduces the others to nothing by comparison as far as cost is concerned. And if he were a pupil, and had successfully completed the Grade 9 examination papers in fundamental subjects that recently stumped him so badly, he would greatly resent the suggestion that he was wasting time on ex-frill studies.

In a letter to the committee, Brahm Wiesman, planning director, said it was the unanimous opinion of the board that no development should take place at Victoria College without ensuring that adequate land is available for the campus.

Present plans of the Victoria College council are for the construction of new buildings on College without prior consideration of the eventual need for a larger site.

Record Turnout At Colwood Fair

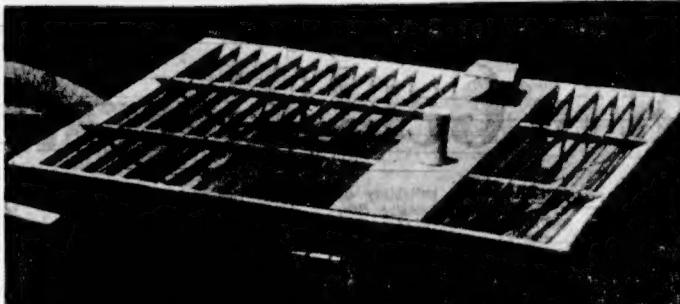

The largest attendance and greatest number of exhibitors in several years turned the 12th annual country fair in Colwood Community Hall yesterday into a success.

Since the Colwood Community Club has gone out of existence, the fair was sponsored by the Colwood Women's Institute this year.

The fair was officially opened last night by Mrs. Stela Gunn, superintendent of B.C. Women's Institutes.

Prize-winners: outdoor-grown flowers, Mrs. E. C. Parker; basket of flowers, Mrs. David Flatman; fresh fruit, Mrs. R. B. Murray; vegetables, Mrs. J. S. Williams; canning, Mrs. Stanley Owen; home-cooking, Mrs. W. Parker; and needlework, Mrs. Parker.

Winner of most points among competitors aged 11 to 16 years was Dale Peatt. Lynda Acres topped those in the six-to-10-year bracket.

Royal Probe Sought By Fraser Fishermen

FORT LANGLEY, B.C. (CP) — A meeting of 100 fishermen Saturday protested closing of the upper Fraser River Sept. 16 to salmon fishing and called for a Royal Commission to examine some of their problems.

REQUESTS BACKED

The meeting backed requests by business agent Homer Stevens of the B.C. Fishermen's Union for abolition of a regulation which automatically closes the river between Pattullo and Mission bridges and examination by the commission of pollution, logging control and fishing licence policy.

The requests will be forwarded to Fisheries Minister Angus MacLean, George Hahn and Tom Irwin, members of parliament for New Westminster and Burnaby, Richmond respectively, pledged their support.

DESERVE SHARE

Mr. Stevens said upper Fraser River fishermen deserve a share in the impending run of pink salmon and should have the same fishing time as those working the rest of District 1, which covers the river, Burrard Inlet, Howe Sound and part of Nanaimo. 72 Monday outlook, a few showers.

He said the Sept. 16 closure was instituted as an effort at salmon conservation which has proved to be wrong.

He still thinks so, but came to the realization that we first should decide what to do with them when they are thrown out. Who wants them? Employers do to a sharply diminishing extent. And for the cost of keeping one lagger-turned-worse in Boys' Industrial School, several ordinary laggards can be kept in high school.

At first he thought the department of education would have no greater desire than to take full control of the school system throughout B.C.

He found he was wrong.

These are just a few of the ways that his mind changed as he went along. Perhaps these articles will change some readers' minds too.

The next article will begin to tell how much we spend on education.

Born Pierre Bissone Raymond, he is better known as Mr. Teazy Weazy, a name that stuck to him after he introduced a new split curl on the British Broadcasting Corporation's television four years ago. He called it teazy weazy.

"Actually," he said, "I think the name's revolting, but it's too late to do anything about it now."

Mr. Teazy Weazy can back up with hard facts considerable claim to more fantastic haircuts than any man since the shearing of Samson.

He employs 800 people in his plush beauty parlors that are spread through Britain's biggest cities. Even his rivals grudgingly admit that his gross yearly business is more than £1,000,000 ($2,800,000).

He has a spacious London apartment and a big house with landscaped grounds in the country. He owns three expensive automobiles and a string of race horses. He has a lovely wife and three pretty daughters named Cherry, Amber and Scarlet.

His clients include: The Duchess of Marlborough, Princess Alexandra, Lady Beatty and when she was in England, the Duchess of Windsor.

Asked if his hands were worth £25,000, he sniffed:

"When I was 28 I insured my hands for £100,000. But I stopped insuring them at 38 because it was no longer necessary. My business is my insurance."

Vow to Each OtherTownsend or No One Margaret's Decision

LONDON (AP)—The Sunday Pictorial said last night Princess Margaret has taken a vow never to marry anyone but Group Capt. Peter Townsend.

PRINCESS MARGARET
Dramatic rejection.

"At last the bitter truth about Princess Margaret can be told," it said.

The paper devoted its entire front page to a story that Margaret and Townsend made a pact never to marry. A few members of the Royal Family had known it, the Pictorial said.

In October two years ago, Princess Margaret publicly rejected Townsend's love—and his reported eagerness to marry her—for her duty to her country.

At that time the pretty princess and the divorced Second World War hero were constantly in one another's company. Many persons expected an announcement that they would wed.

Instead, there was Margaret's dramatic rejection.

"She has taken a vow never to marry anyone else," said the Pictorial.

It gave "a friend of Townsend" as the source of its information.

This informant, not identified by name, was quoted as saying:

"Townsend was then a shattered man. He told us quietly: 'as we cannot marry each other, then neither of us will ever marry anyone else.'"

On Friday the state department announced the United States was airlifting arms to Jordan and rushing military supplies to other neighbors of Syria.

The president authorized the accelerated delivery to the countries of the area of economic and other defensive items which have been programmed for their use," the statement said.

EXPRESSED HOPE

"The president expressed the hope that the international Communists would not push Syria into any acts of aggression against her neighbors and that the people of Syria would act to allay the anxiety caused by recent events."

Eisenhower got a full report from diplomatic trouble-shooter Loy Henderson, just returned from a two-week tour of Turkey, Iraq, Jordan and Lebanon, where he conferred with high officials on Syria's shift toward the Communist camp.

Henderson reported, the communiqué said, "that he found in the Middle East deep concern about the apparently growing Soviet Communist domination of Syria, and the large build-up of Soviet bloc arms, a build-up which could not be justified by any purely defensive needs." The statement added:

"There was particular concern over border incidents and intensive propaganda and subversive activities directed toward the overthrow of the duly constituted governments of Syria's Arab neighbors."

Other guests will include Rear-Admiral H. S. Rayner, Flag Officer Pacific Coast; Maj. D. H. Protheroe, Mayor Percy Scurrah, Air Commodore A. D. Ross, and Col. P. S. Cooper, commandant of Royal Roads College.

Some 75 members and their guests are expected to attend the dinner.

Theft was discovered at 3:30 a.m. by the night Saanich police patrol. Entry was gained through a side window that was broken. Thieves then walked into the office and carted the safe away in a motor vehicle.

An $85 watch, some tools and pens and business papers were also stolen, police and manager Archie Hopfe said.

Research Is Vital

RESEARCH is essential in any industrial operation and vitally so in the case of British Columbia's forest production. By now calling attention to the neglected recommendation in his earlier report that the Province revitalize forestry research under the Crown, Chief Justice Sloan has the record clearly on his side. It is a fact that successive governments over James Bay have been content to let this matter drag. Yet there is no agency in B.C. with more to gain than the Province itself in keeping abreast of the latest developments in timber growth, development and use. A substantial part of provincial revenue comes from the softwood stands of B.C.

In his latest report the commissioner has emphasized his earlier proposal. It is that the Province should establish in the headquarters Victoria area a provincial research establishment; complete with offices, testing station, and the necessary staff and equipment to do a thorough job on silvicultural studies. The report finds that the efforts of the Province in this direction have been allowed to deteriorate, with frustration and discouragement to the trained foresters in the employ of the Crown, and that no advance of any significant nature has been made towards the ground that must be occupied—that of a full, working forest research establishment—dependent of the industry, the science wing of the UBC and all else.

One can support such a recommendation without reservation. If the Province occupies its proper role in this connection it will be adding to, and not detracting from, all forestry research carried on within British Columbia. The program of such a service would be concerned with permanent, enduring matters, and not just the day-to-day technical questions submitted by the industry to the university or tackled by lumber firms in their own laboratories. The purposes are distinctly separate, while provincial requirements in research can hardly be met in any lesser manner.

Licensing Small Boats

BECAUSE of the extraordinary and continuing increase in the popularity of powerboats, notably those driven by outboard motors, it seems inevitable that the system of licensing by the federal government which applies now to larger craft will be extended to include them all. This question has been mentioned in Parliament on several occasions during the last year or two, and under the Liberal government the department of transport began an exploratory study of the situation. Fact and opinion-finding questionnaires were sent to boating clubs and other interested organizations, and the issue is expected to be the subject of an early conference between departmental officials and representatives of the boatowners.

The ultimate outcome is almost certain to be an all-encompassing system of licensing; but the issue is broader than the mere establishment of regulations. To be fully effective it must include provision for enforcement, which would mean the establishment of water police. At present administration of the safety clauses of the Canada Shipping Act with respect to privately-owned boats is handled by the RCMP. Policing is carried out most efficiently in these waters, but to an extent severely limited by the number of launches and officers available, seldom going beyond inspection of equipment.

If traffic control on the waterways is to be anything like that on the highways the expense would be enormous in both manpower and patrol craft. Up to now the weight of opinion, on the part of the transport department as well as of the boatowners, has been that it should not be necessary to impose a licensing fee, or at most a nominal one. But if licensing is going to entail heavy additional cost for enforcement it seems reasonable that those for whose safety it is intended should contribute accordingly, as do motorists using the highways.

Hard to Swallow

THE former finance minister, Mr. Walter Harris, is quoted as telling the Ontario Young Liberals that he takes full blame for the defeat of his party in that province at the June election. By that token he would have taken sole credit had the St. Laurent administration been returned to power. The election result cannot be so assessed, however; it was not a single Liberal fault nor a single Liberal cabinet minister that caused the defeat of that party.

Mr. Harris said he should have explained his last budget more fully and have adopted a more acceptable farm policy. These are but two of the items that accumulated against the former government however. It was the totality of its record that caused its rejection at the polls, the conviction in Ontario as well as across the country as a whole that the Liberals had outmoded themselves by overlong stay in power and that a clean sweep was in order.

The Liberal Party seems to find it hard to accept this explanation of the June 10 test, hence the repeated post-mortems and analysis of their defeat culminating now in one minister's admission that he was to blame. It is unfortunate that Mr. Harris himself lost his seat, for this deprives Parliament of a capable and experienced member, yet strange that he does not recognize in his own instance a reflection of the general turn of the tide.

Defeat at the polls is hard to swallow of course, and obviously the Liberals have not yet got over their upset. Doubtless they find it unpalatable to concede the simple fact that the nation preferred to entrust its political destiny to another administration. That in essence is all there was to the last federal election.

Rising Costs

There are serious problems facing the weekly newspaper industry today. High wage levels, constantly rising cost of materials and equipment, and a shortage of experienced workers are placing a very heavy demand on the productive and management skills of publishers, who seek to hold down costs as the alternative to increasing advertising and subscription rates. Their problem becomes even more acute when, because of rapid growth of the communities they serve, they must enlarge their plant and equipment, placing a great strain on limited reserves.

Good Customers

Good news, not only for city council but for the whole of the district, was announced this week when the national organization of the IWA purchased the $14,500 outstanding city bonds.

The IWA purchase means that the whole of the $144,000 bonds have now been picked up.

Studying the matter on a dollar basis, the IWA could have made better investments elsewhere but the organization preferred to invest in the community in which its members live, work and play and the whole district should feel grateful to the union for its action.

The Saltair Water Board

Construction of the Saltair Water System is now well under way and there is every indication that it will be completed according to plan and within the allotted sum of money and the allotted time. As the successive lengths of pipe are laid and covered over and the service is extended to more and more of the district, much of the dissension which marked the beginnings of the system is fading into the past. In a few short years the water service will become an accepted part of the community. Something to be taken for granted.

Some of the history of this particular phase in Saltair's development should be buried with the pipe and forgotten, but before all the details become blurred with time, it is fitting that

Sentimental Farewell

The Cowichan show is the sixth Class B show held here and has won its spurs as an exhibition, despite heavy losses on entertainment.

It seems likely that this will be the final show on the old grounds. Plans are going ahead to move the show to a new site on Duncan's northern boundary next year, B.C.'s centenary. There will be a sentimental farewell then to the traditional role of the old grounds in the minds and hearts of more than one patron of this year's annual show.

Thinking Aloud

" . . . of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

I CAST an eye up the aerial gradient towards the Lions, couchant, the other day; the twin recumbents who presumably guard the portals of Vancouver against the infidels of, say, Victoria. Truth to tell they are not twins at all, for as you look closely, or as closely as possible from a few miles distant, you perceive that one has a mane and the other, apparently, has not. She will be a lioness, I suppose.

But there they are, 5,000 feet above Burrard Inlet. For a moment I wished myself up beside them but this was only Mitty-like vanity. On reflection I realized that, scenically speaking, I am not a mountain man. Ruskin said that mountains were the beginning and end of all natural scenery, but not, I fear, for yours truly. I can look towards Mount Baker or across to the Olympics and sense the austere majesty of snowy heights but if the truth is to be told, and on Sunday mornings I seldom indulge in fibs, mountains are not my cup of tea.

Sometimes at the home of a friend who has taken the grand European tour I will sit in dutiful admiration when slides are shown of those white peaks we call the Alps, and join in the general sense of well-being engendered by pictorial view of nature's turbulent masterpieces, but actually they leave me as cold as they look. Similarly I listen attentively to tales of sport and pleasure among the Rockies, but I am afraid I was not born for higher things. I have of course glimpsed these heights at one time or another but for all their reputed and doubtless genuine grandeur the Rockies, even that loftiest of all their Canadian peaks, Mount Waddington, which understandably hid behind a cloud its 12,972-foot summit from my unappreciative gaze the last time I was in its neighbourhood, leave me unmoved. I may be in a minority of one but pastoral scenes suit my mood much better.

A hill, again, is something different, albeit a prevailing regret is that so many of our hills are covered so closely with trees one scarcely sees a hill in these parts. It is not always easy to differentiate, of course; the term, like that of mountain, has its vagueness and indeed peculiarity. A mountain, I believe, is an upthrust of Mother Nature which reaches a height of 1,000 feet or over but apparently that is a mere convenience of speech. For example Mount Arrowsmith at 5,952 feet and Mount Douglas at 739 feet are scarcely to be mentioned in the same geographic breath yet both bear the same semantic accolade. The latter in fact is not so very much higher than a certain Hill 60 which many Canadians remember, although on the occasion that sticks in their memory Hill 60 was probably as difficult to ascend as Arrowsmith.

I can recall also, even if no mountaineer, having walked up some of the Judean Hills, fortunately from an approach that enables one to remain perpendicular without ropes or crampons, and the tableland whereon I trod is listed at some 2,000 feet, double the ranking of the lowest mountain. Geographers, I suspect, like to puzzle ordinary beings. I was not as well versed in certain things as I am now when I made camp on the Judean highlands, but even so they presented, if I remember rightly, none too attractive a scenic vista. My mind, of course, may have been centred on bully beef and biscuits, a diet not calculated to stimulate an aesthetic appreciation of one's surroundings.

It is not claustrophobia that dictates my preference but rather the peaceful pleasure afforded by copse and dale, by stream and country lane. I would rather pause on the Pat Bay highway and gaze down to Cowichan Head than lift my eyes to Mount Everest.

Londoner Abroad

The Will and the Way in Travel

By RICHARD L. THOMAS, Daily Colonist London correspondent now visiting Victoria.

THE other day I went on an ocean voyage from Victoria to Port Angeles. The distance is approximately the same as from Dover to Calais and what interested me most was the simplicity of the travel formalities. A Canadian or an American merely had to produce some evidence of identity and that was that. There was even one good gentleman who could not produce such evidence but upon being vouched for by those who could was allowed to proceed.

Canadians and Americans take this for granted. I saw the same system at work on the train between Montreal and New York—the minimum of fuss and the maximum of goodwill; and like the American-Canadian border it is a model of international goodwill, devoid of guns, bayonets, booby traps, barbed wire and tanks.

Travellers between Canada and the United States no doubt accept the simple travel formalities without very much thought.

They may even be surprised to learn that what they experience any day, any time, to suit their conveniences the British Foreign Office solemnly declares to be "impossible." Just how will discover when you travel from Dover to Calais and, incidentally, pay three times as much for the journey in a literal conversion from dollars to sterling without any allowance for differentiation in earnings. In terms of earning capacity the Briton pays about five times as much for his trip across the Channel.

I am still a little surprised that the United States has managed to accommodate such simplicity. No doubt the Canadian is innocent abroad when it comes to knowing how a Briton gets an American visa. First, of course, you have to attend the consulate in person and remember that the consulate lunches from noon until 2 p.m. Like the national health service you cannot make an appointment. You have to wait. I was fortunate I only waited 2 hours 10 minutes; many wait longer.

You fill in a form in which amongst other things you have to provide the name and address of someone knowing you in the United States—which could be a complication for many people. You then have to swear that you have never been convicted of a criminal offence, which seems reasonable enough, and that you have never been a member of the Communist Party. There are a few other intimate questions. The next stage is an audience with the consul. He asks a few more questions and then you get handed over to the typists' pool—who proceed to type out all the documents on various forms and hand you over complete with forms to the finger-printing department.

Here you register each finger and thumb separately and then all together, hand over a passport photograph (which you have brought with you) and disappear to the washroom where you try very hard to eliminate the ink. Back again you are duly sworn that everything you have declared is true, that the fingerprints are yours and presto!—the visa is stamped in your passport. There is a typical bureaucratic kick in the tail when you are handed a form which tells you that the visa does not guarantee your admission to the United States and that it depends upon the officer at the point of entry.

It's effect is somewhat softened by a delightful piece of unbureaucratic bonhomie in the form of a final paragraph, "We of the Embassy staff sincerely hope that you have a pleasant trip to our country."

After all that I got my visa. I have not to date been refused entry and, on the contrary, I was given a ticket valid for three months because the officer concerned did not think I would want the bother of filling in forms if I crossed and recrossed. So things could not be more amicable, but at least the Americans know when I go into their country that I am not a Communist, that I have no criminal convictions, and they have my photograph and fingerprints.

It seems that Canadians may be Communists, have a criminal record as long as my arm and still go in and out with no fingerprints or photograph on the record—and yet the country manages to survive. It goes to show what can be done if you want to do it.

You may have heard about the Anglo-French concession described as day-trip no passport excursions to France. It is a fabulous achievement of the bureaucratic mind and most people find it a great deal more convenient to obtain a passport. True the certificate which is necessary costs only a quarter as much as a passport but it lasts 12 hours instead of five years. You have to have three photo-

The Columbia Theatre showed "Vanishing Frontier," starring John Mack Brown; the Capitol, Benita Hume in "Women Who Delay"; the Empire, Arthur Wontner in "The Sign of Four"; the Romano Theatre, Lew Cody in "X Marks the Spot"; the Playhouse, "New York Nights," with Norma Talmadge.

Impending retirement of Assistant Commissioner W. R. Dunwoody of B.C. Police was announced by Attorney-General R. H. Pooley. Inspector T. W. S. Parsons was to be named second-in-command to Commissioner J. H. McMullen; and Sub-Inspector Robert Owens was to be Inspector.

Major James H. Doolittle set an air speed record of 298.287 miles an hour, the fastest ever travelled by a land-based plane up to that time.

LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR James Dunsmuir was burned in effigy at a procession of the Asiatic Exclusion League in Vancouver, 50 years ago.

A thousand marchers waved banners bearing anti-Asiatic mottoes and calling for a "white Canada." A gang of toughs ranged through the Chinese and Japanese quarters, breaking windows. The Japanese fought back, and a riot followed. Several persons were injured.

A mob of hooligans attacked East Indian mill workers in Bellingham, Washington.

Crying "drive out the Hindus," 500 white men raided mills, battered in the doors of lodging houses, dragged the immigrants from their beds and ran them out of town.

The Cunard liner Lusitania started on her maiden voyage from Liverpool.

A NUMBER of smells and dangers were found in colonial Victoria by a "Committee on Nuisances," 50 years ago.

They included the following: "... on the south side of Yates Street, near the bank of British North America, a disagreeable stench arising from stagnant water proceeding from a drain connecting with the Colonial Hotel and Gipsy House bath . . ."

"On the corner of Douglas and View Streets, filthy puddles . . . from a Bath House . . . great difficulty to vehicles . . ."

"James bridge, at the south end, very insecure . . . lives of the public endangered for want of a substantial railing."

"A number of pigs kept in the space between Government, Johnson, Yates and Wharf Streets, to the great annoyance of the citizens . . . also a number of pigs in the gully between Johnson and Cormorant Streets."

The Packsack

By GREGORY CLARK

THE negro musical voice is inimitable. Whether singing the negro folk songs and spirituals or letting off in the jubilant whoopee that derives from the African heritage, it has qualities of tone and timbre that other races simply do not. Physiologically, possess. But this fact does not deter an extraordinary proportion of our non-negro entertainment world from desperately attempting to imitate negroes in voice and in enunciation.

Even before jazz, which was negro in origin, took over possession of the present generation, white men were trying to sing like negroes. The minstrel shows which travelled the continent were largely made up of white men made to look like negroes. But the music of the best of them was a travesty on such true negro music as we heard in travelling spiritual singers. Personally, I used to shudder to hear Laurence Tibbett singing "Sho'nuff" Bread" or Nelson Eddy singing "Water Boy" in what they deemed to be very artistic imitations of the true negro singing.

Little did I know, as I shuddered, that the day would come when a thousand disc jockeys all over the day and night of all radio dials, would land, occupying hour upon hour both endlessly whooping up year following year a staggering procession of nothing but negro music, with ninths of it white singers, men and women, grotesquely striving to imitate negroes, and failing.

Not all negro singers are good, any more than all white singers are good. Those who are in a class by themselves that no white imitators can invade. But we now have the weird spectacle of negro quartets, in the not-so-good category, trying to sing like white men trying to imitate negroes. And there you have a dandy mixup which comically underlines the curiosity of the present popular musical mode.

But it is vain of those of us who like a little negro music from time to time, as we like a little church music from time to time, or a little classical on occasion, or a little dance music when in the mood, to protest this almost frenzied eruption of one shape of music. It has continued so long. It shows no signs of declining. And all our protests are drowned, like cricket's chirp, in a vast continental musical beller.

Play Tit-for-Tat

City slickers—otherwise sneak thieves! These critters seem to think it clever to go out into the country, drain the gas out of people's cars, steal firewood which some man had cut and split and piled to sell to neighbors—and marked mainly "private, do not touch"—not to mention going onto privately-owned land—and cutting down small trees for Christmas.

It seems to be about time for some of us to lie in wait, and get the car licence numbers of these miserable objects, and then go and raid their gardens, remove their fences and play tit-for-tat.

Singers Wanted

The executive of the Victoria Choral Society have asked me to request the opportunity previously afforded in your correspondence columns to invite singers to the first rehearsal for our winter season, which takes place on Tuesday, Sept. 17, at 7:30 p.m. in the Memorial Hall, Vancouver and Rockland. The invitation is specially directed to any newcomers to the city who may not know of the society's activities and the many interesting choral concerts that it has given in past years.

In December we intend to perform Vaughan Williams' new Christmas Cantata entitled "This Day." The work was written only three years ago, and as this is the year of the composer's 85th birthday it is felt that it will be a worthwhile tribute to his genius, besides affording our members the opportunity of learning a great choral masterpiece in modern idiom. It will be performed with full orchestral accompaniment.

The Civic Dinner

May I just add a word with reference to your editorial this morning "Awkward Precedent". The tenor of your article implies that the city council should not have appropriated $2,800 with which to entertain the visiting delegates of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce and that by so doing the council have placed themselves in an awkward position because of a labor protest and that they could not in future refuse to do the same if some labor organization asked for similar treatment.

Your approach to the problem is definitely wrong. The city council, in this instance, has followed a very correct course. They have simply done, as any large industry would, and does do, make provision to entertain what might be very important customers in the future. In other words a normal advertising expense that all large enterprises have to do.

There is no possible comparison in any way between the chamber of commerce and a labor organization. The latter, at any time, in no way at all, directly or indirectly, can do any good for Victoria or any other city. They do not bring industries to any areas. As a matter of fact their whole philosophy is agitating against all business, and in many cases they drive industry away because of their incessant demands.

In your same issue is a letter from Robert H. Fench asking if the council would do the same thing for the old-age pensioners. I happen to be nearly sick of the O.A.P. The more you do for them out of the public purse the more abusive and dissatisfied they get. Let me remind Mr. French that it is not a question as to whether the city council would give the O.A.P.s a dinner at Christmas. The taxpayers now give them breakfast, lunch and dinner every day of the week.

The council has done right there is no mistake about that.

No Room for Daughters As Parliament Opens

By TOM GREEN

Special to the Colonist

OTTAWA—Come early in the new week, there are going to be a few disappointed young ladies and women in Canada.

This weekend invitations went out for the opening of Parliament in the Senate chamber by Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth on Monday, Oct. 14.

Daughters are excluded from the invitations. Hitherto invitations to members of the Commons, the diplomatic corps, privy councillors, etc., have included daughters. Not so this year.

Also not receiving invitations this year are federal deputy ministers and other civil servants of equivalent rank. It will be the first time that they and their wives and daughters have not been invited to the formal opening.

Even Supreme Court of Canada judges are not managing to get their daughters in this year.

Normally about 800 invitations are sent out for the opening of Parliament. Acceptance runs to about 50 per cent. This year only 600 invitations are being sent out, but it is figured acceptance will be 95 per cent.

In May, 1939, King George VI gave Royal assent to bills in the Senate chamber. The usual invitations were sent out then. But at that time there were fewer than 10 diplomatic missions in Ottawa, there were fewer MPs and generally fewer people entitled to the invitations.

LONDON—The subversive antics of Canada's Anna Russell are drawing steady applause from culture-minded critics at the Edinburgh Festival.

The comedienne's murderous repertoire of take-offs on Wagnerian sopranos, folksong collectors and other types of vocalists is hailed as "the eggheads' Gracie Fields."

"She has the same irreverent cackle, the same jutting jaw, and the same jutting jaw, and the same blessed touch of vulgarity," The Spectator says.

SANTA MONICA, Calif.—An accident at dinner put Adolphe Menjou, 67, in hospital for X-rays and treatment. Peter Menjou said his father caught his foot between the table and chair. He fell over backwards, pulling ligaments in his right hip and leg.

HOBOKEN, N.J.—Swedish actress Inger Stevens was overcome by carbon monoxide early yesterday in a tunnel movie location beneath the Hudson River. She was rescued after nine hours.

VANCOUVER—Premier Bennett's plan to create employment through appeals to have repair work done during the winter was described as "ridiculous" by Bill Black, president of the B.C. Federation of Labor. "It won't solve the major problem," he said. "We need a major public works program."

HANOVER, N.H. (CP)—John Diefenbaker, making his first address to a United States audience as Canadian prime minister, last night called for an approach of common sense, frankness and mutual trust to U.S.-Canadian relations. "What I have said is not spoken in a spirit of truculence or of opposition."

Canada's trade imbalance with the U.S., the American wheat-disposal give-away program and the nature of U.S. capital investment in Canada, he said, all are causing unrest within his country.

He cautioned the U.S. against policies that could weaken economically the smaller free countries, such as Canada.

GIVEN DOCTORATE

In Britain last June, he said, he had discussed "family problems" with other Commonwealth countries. Here he was discussing "neighborly problems."

The occasion was the final session of a three-day seminar on "Great Issues," an annual event at Dartmouth College, which earlier yesterday conferred an honorary doctorate of laws upon Mr. Diefenbaker. The seminar's "great issues" this year were the problems confronting the United Kingdom-United States-Canada community.

Other speakers last night were Sir Harold Caccia, British ambassador in Washington, and State Secretary Dulles of the United States.

The Canadian government, like that of the U.S., had the responsibility of placing its country's interests first, Mr. Diefenbaker said.

His purpose in direct speaking was to have causes for disagreement removed. Unsolved, they could diminish the spirit of understanding characteristic of U.S.-Canadian relations. "What I have said is not spoken in a spirit of truculence or of opposition."

Canada was the United States' greatest customer and the U.S. was Canada's greatest. But the U.S. was buying mainly raw materials or partially-manufactured materials. "For the U.S. tariff problem prohibits any major import of manufactured goods."

"This concentration of trade in one channel contains inherent dangers for Canada."

"It makes the Canadian economy altogether vulnerable to sudden changes in trading policy at Washington."

"Canadians do not wish to have their economic, any more than their political, affairs determined outside Canada."

'Prurient Pest' Losing His Punch?

Since centenary celebrations seem to be the vogue just now I should like to draw your attention to the fact that this year we are celebrating the hundredth birthday of two works of art of prime importance.

Both are works of literature: one a novel, the other a collection of poems; both were written in France by French men; taken together they mark the opening of a new era in literature to which we of the 20th century are profoundly indebted.

In the first place, I believe

I refer, as you may have guessed, to the publication in 1857 of Gustave Flaubert's "Madame Bovary" and Charles Baudelaire's "Les Fleurs du Mal."

Now some of you will say:

"But these are in French, which I do not understand, and I am told by experts that works of art in foreign languages lose everything in translation. How can I be expected to enjoy them?" To which there are a number of answers.

Firstly, we should be ashamed of ourselves if we allow our students to leave high school without a sound reading knowledge of French. A speaking knowledge is naturally desirable, too, but the difficulties of reading sufficient teachers capable of imparting a fluent oral command of French is probably inapplicable at present.

This should not prevent us from proclaiming loudly at the opening of every school term that one goal of B.C. education should be the production of genuinely bilingual students at the high school level. When we achieve this goal we shall have made a significant advance towards a nationhood that is at present largely illusory.

Secondly, it is not strictly true that all works in a foreign language lose every thing in translation. Most novels lose little in the process, and "Bovary" is no exception. A good translation such as those by Alan Russell and Eleanor Marx Aveling in the Penguin and Modern Library editions respectively will give you all but the celebrated prose rhythms of Flaubert.

Poetry, I am bound to confess, is another matter. I doubt if any great poem can survive translation, though if the translator is an artist a Pound, a Fitzgerald, a Scott-Moncrieff—he may create another work of art parallel to, though different from, the original.

But Baudelaire's poetry is not obscure; a modest acquaintance with the music of the French tongue will give you the sound, while Mr. Harap's invaluable dictionary and your own triumphs long ago in Grade 9 and 10 should yield you the sense. It's worth a try.

The publication of these two works in book form in 1857 was attended by the usual uproar that greets every original work of art. Baudelaire was prosecuted for "an offence against public morality," fined 600 francs and had six of his poems suppressed; Flaubert, arraigned on the same charge, was acquitted.

These partial victories over Grundyism and Bumbledom were important for us today.

In England then, unfortunately, those dark forces were stronger than in France, which partly explains why in place of a "Bovary" 1857 across the Channel produced a "Little Dorrit," a "Wormian" and a "Barchester towers" which though evidently praiseworthy in themselves are not worthy to be beside Flaubert's masterpiece.

We are not yet entirely free from that prurient pest, the censor, but at least books coming into Canada are no longer at the unpredictable mercy of the customs department.

It is perhaps too much to expect that all the learned judges in the land are equally broadminded, but at least sound judgments like that of Judge Woolsey in the Ulysses case exist as precedents for learned counsel to invoke.

Students of contemporary art may derive comfort from the fact that in 1857 Courbet's pictures in the Paris Salon "frightened mothers of families, upset police commissioners, displeased dignified men and terrified the Academy" in the words of a critic of the time. Today those pictures are in the Louvre, the Petit Palais, the National Gallery.

Where are the police commissioners and the "dignified

KOVACH AND RABOVSKY
... five regulars, two extras

At long last, after corrections, substitutions and delays, Famous Artists has completed the list for its 1957-58 season in Victoria.

The regulars and their dates, all to appear in the Royal Theatre, are in order: pianist Boris Goldovsky, Oct. 16; ballet dancers Kovach and Rabovsky, Nov. 25; violinist Yehudi Menuhin, Jan. 20; baritone Jan Rubes, March 11; Little Gaelic Singers of County Derry, April 21.

The extras will be "La Traviata," by the 60-member Wagner Opera Company of New York, Nov. 7, and Anna Russell, March 24.

Best news of all is that while the Ballet Russe will not be here this season, Canada's International Ballet, whose company includes Jacqueline Ivings of Victoria, likely will be featured as a Famous Artists extra.

Season ticket sales are running ahead of last year. Buyers of these may get reduced prices for Vancouver appearances of the Royal Sardis' Wells ballet and the Italian Symphony Orchestra.

Victoria Theatre Guild has completed 60 per cent of its forthcoming season of five plays.

After the opening "Castle in the Air," which starts two weeks from yesterday, will be "The Mousetrap" in Langham Court Theatre Nov. 16 to 23 and "Duet for Two Hands" Jan. 18 to 25.

Ticket sales for the first play, a light comedy featuring Deryk Lachlan, Annabel Cranston, Veronica Thomas and John Martin, open at Kent's Ltd. Sept. 23.

Theatre Guild's studio group will present a new program of lectures on Thursday at 8 p.m. when Mrs. Helen Smith talks in Langham Court Theatre on voice production.

Later talks will be by Dorothy Whyte, Stan Wade, Roger Kemble and Ron Clydesdale on such items as stage deportment, costumes, makeup and direction.

The studio group plans two public shows, three one-act plays in early December and two one-actors after Christmas.

the Island drama festival in April.

Anyone interested in studio work is asked to contact Mrs. Dorothy House, chairman of the group, at 3-2518 or be at the theatre Thursday evening.

Off the Record

Pat Boone's Brother Faces Jinx

Pat Boone's little brother is brother's efforts. However a take jazz will go for this one in trying to crack the record little work should fit that, and a big way.

Nick Boone has cut his first disc for Dot Records, the label that Pat helped boost from obscurity to one of the hottest in the business. But Nick, who says he wants to make it on his own merits, isn't recording under his own name.

Instead, he's taken the word Dot, spelled it backwards, added a letter for pronunciation purposes and presto—meet Nick Todd, a star in the making. Of course, the company has made sure that every disc jockey knows who Nick really is, so he gets the benefit of all the extra publicity anyway. Which may or may not help.

His first record is, like most of Pat's discs, a remake of an oldie, "The Honey Song." His voice is pleasant, a great deal like Pat's, but without the easy-going polish that marks his

Every time a customer buys a recording on the North American continent, about five pennies of every dollar go into something called the Music Performance Trust Fund.

One of the biggest employers of musicians in the world, and certainly the least-publicized, this trust fund was set up about nine years ago at the suggestion of Musicians' Union president James C. Petrillo, and the volume of its work is slightly staggering.

Receiving funds from TV shows using union-made music as well as money from sale of recordings, the trust fund is expected to spend $4,650,000 in the year ending next June to provide free concerts in a great variety of places—and that figure is up about 18 per cent from the year just passed.

The trust fund, which has independent administration provided over 10,600 projects in the U.S. and Canada in the past year, giving work to 249,000 musicians. In its eight years in Victoria, it has spent between $15,000 and $20,000.

"BREAD AND BUTTER"

The trust fund should do well from a real "bread and butter" record issued this past week by Mercury, a pairing of Chopin's music in "Les Sylphides" with the little-known "La Peri" by Paul Dukas.

It's just an average perfor-

ance by the Halle orchestra

(George Weldon conducting),

but even with the tuneless and colorless "La Peri," the Chopin music should give Mercury one of its biggest sellers in the company's campaign to crack into the big time of serious-music recordings sales.

Symphony Plans 20 Concerts

Canada's Top Soprano Coming

Canada's finest soprano will sing here, conductor Hans Gruber announced yesterday, making public the final list of guest artists and conductors with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra during the 1957-58 season.

Toronto's Lois Marshall will be the soloist, singing Mozart arias and motets, in the ninth of the 10 pairs of concerts, and it is expected that Miss Marshall also will appear in one of the four Duncan concerts.

The season is the 17th for the orchestra and the 10th for Mr. Gruber, and it is only the second in which the orchestra has offered as many as 10 pairs of programs. Sale of season tickets begins at Eaton's box office tomorrow, with no change in price.

DETAILS SHORTLY

In addition to the regular and Duncan programs, the orchestra will announce details of extra concerts for students, and is arranging an up-island tour of Nanaimo, Port Alberni and Courtenay next spring under sponsorship of the B.C. Centennial committee.

What Caused Race Crisis? Enter Governor Faubus

GOV. ORVAL FAUBUS

Washington Won't Act

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Eisenhower and Attorney-General Herbert Brownell, Jr. yesterday decided against immediate federal intervention in the Little Rock school integration case.

They agreed to give the U.S. district court at Little Rock, Arkansas Gov. Orval E. Faubus, or the Negro plaintiffs another chance to settle the explosive issue through legal channels.

Press Secretary James C. Hagerty and Justice department sources reported the high-level decision, reached in and after a 45-minute White House conference.

Will President Grab Guard?

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—The Arkansas Democrat last night quoted its Washington correspondent as saying that President Eisenhower is considering the possibility of federalizing the Arkansas National Guard.

The story said the joint chiefs of staff had recommended such action if Gov. Orval Faubus continues to use state militiamen in the Little Rock school integration crisis.

The decision was not changed, Hagerty said, by district Judge Ronald N. Davies' ruling yesterday rejecting the Little Rock school board's appeal for an indefinite delay in carrying out the integration order.

The president broke off his Newport, R.I., vacation to fly here for a day of conferences on the Arkansas school problem and the Middle East situation.

FEDERAL ACTION
Hagerty said Brownell discussed with the chief executive the alternatives for federal government action in the face of the governor's continued defiance of federal court orders to admit Negro students to Little Rock's Central High School.

Officials said a court injunction against the governor's blockade of the school against nine Negro students may be the next step if Faubus refuses to yield to yesterday's ruling.

Justice department sources said the court has full authority to initiate the injunction, or it could be requested by the plaintiffs—attorneys for the Negro children. A third possibility is that the judge will ask the federal government to prosecute Faubus or other Arkansas officials for contempt.

Pinks Make Up For Sockeye

VANCOUVER (CP)—An unusually good run of pink salmon in northern Pacific waters this season is compensating commercial fishermen for a poor run of sockeye salmon earlier this year.

Latest pack figures show a total of 486,678 cases of pinks accounting for more than half the total salmon pack of 960,260 cases. This is the best pack since 1953.

Farm Fertilizer Makes Explosives

By HARRY YOUNG
Colonist Business Editor

I hear that Canadian Industries is starting to market a new explosive which is composed entirely of agricultural fertilizers.

So far the new explosive is not available in the west, and it can be used only in dry holes of wide diameter. The advantage is that it is considerably cheaper than the usual type of explosive and may be of great benefit in many types of operations.

NEW TYPE COVERAGE

Many firms cover their employees with pension and other insurance plans, but so far as Canada is concerned it has been left to a Toronto paint firm to extend the life insurance protection to its dealers and their employees.

The Glidden Company announces it will pay the full costs of the scheme. Each year the dealership will qualify for a total amount of insurance equal to the net purchases from the Glidden Company.

Forty per cent of the insurance will be distributed among principals of the firm and 60 per cent among employees.

Steel Helmets At Windows

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UP)—There hasn't been much serious studying at Central High School this first week of the fall term. Everybody's mind is on the integration problem and outside almost any window of the building the steel helmets of National Guardsmen may be seen.

Some of the pupils, particularly the youngsters of 13, don't seem to comprehend anything about the situation except their firm orders from home: "Don't talk about it."

Few students are willing to discuss the issue created by Gov. Orval E. Faubus' defiance of federal court orders to permit the admission of nine Negroes. Fewer still will allow themselves to be quoted by name because of the supercharged situation.

COULD WORK OUT

Most of the pupils questioned do not like the prospect of going to school with Negro children, but seemed to feel the problem could be worked out among themselves if their elders would stay out of the picture.

But reaction among the students is not entirely one-sided. There have been student suggestions for a boycott because "my parents said they would jerk me out of school if Negroes are admitted."

Newsmen have been discouraged from interviewing students at all. National Guardsmen have been ordered to disperse groups of students being questioned.

DIDN'T OBJECT

A pretty junior class member said she did not object to going to school with Negroes because "I don't have to socialize with them after school."

Some youngsters shy from talking with reporters because of their parents. One boy said his opinion made no difference because "my parents said they would jerk me out of school if Negroes are admitted."

Officers said the two men told them they bought a package of razor blades and a bottle of turpentine and went looking for a victim in Zion City, a large Birmingham Negro section. They were quoted as saying the razor blades were used to emasculate Aaron and the turpentine was added after wards.

Aaron was in fair condition at the Veterans' Hospital here.

"Each man concerned has to decide whether he wants to remain in the division or transfer out," the army said. The 2nd Armored is swapping posts in November with the 4th Armored Division at Fort Hood, Tex.

STRICT LAWS

Texas has strict laws against Negroes and whites living as man and wife. The army said it had advised personnel of the laws.

The army's explanation came after Rep. Charles C. Diggs asked Army Secretary Wilbur M. Brucker to set aside the recommendation for the Negroes to transfer out of the 2nd Armored.

Diggs, one of three Negro members of the House, prodded the army's position in a telegram to Brucker.

Maiming Suspects Arrested

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UP)—A Ku Klux Klan leader and two other white men were held here yesterday on charges of mayhem in the beating, stabbing and razor blade emasculation of a 34-year-old Negro Monday night.

Police said two of the men, William J. Miller, 28, and John N. Griffin, 38, gave them a detailed confession in which they admitted taking part in the mutilation of Judge Aaron, a Negro, apparently picked at random by a group of white men.

"CYCLOPS" CHARGED

Joe P. Pritchett, 31, identified as the "Exalted Cyclops" of a local Ku Klux Klan chapter, was charged but refused to make a statement.

Police were not sure whether Miller and Griffin are Klan members. The three men could get as much as 20 years in prison if convicted.

Miller and Griffin were quoted by police as saying they, Pritchett and three other unidentified men chose Aaron at random while searching for some "damn Negro to scare hell out of."

ED DOROHAY

10-15-57 to cash

Victoria Cougars, working hard to provide Victorians with a colorful and talented hockey club for the 1957-58 season, made their second major player move yesterday when they announced the acquisition of peppery Eddie Dorohoy from the Seattle Americans.

To get the colorful high-scorer points and led the league in goals in the 1956-57 season, when the Cougars won the championship under Roger Le so with 87 points. Dorohoy picked up 87 points to follow the Cougars to a 10th place last season with 78 points.

Dorohoy said last night that he was happy to be home. "This is my home and it's always good to come home," he said.

Doug Kilburn, a member of the world champion Penitton Vics in 1944, was given a trial with the Americans last year and, although he impressed, was sent to Indianapolis of the International League for more seasoning.

Davidson, captain of the Cougars last season, played the 1956-57 campaign with Seattle and spent the two previous seasons at Tacoma. The steady right-winger had trouble getting along with his teammates and now the Cougars expect that he will be a valuable addition.

In addition, Kilburn announced that the Americans had given the Cougars permission to invite Doug Kilburn, Cohn's

former teammate, to attend the Cougars' training camp.

Dorohoy, arriving in Victoria with Cohn, played the 1956-57 season with the Americans and had 100 points. Cohn said that Dorohoy had been a valuable addition to the team.

Lucky Dip Returns $210,000

WEMBLEY, Eng. (CP) — Sydney Windsor dipped his hand into a soup bowl and pulled out 20 and listed them on his football pool entry as likely to result in draws or losses for the home team. He hit the jackpot, picking up the £50,000 for a £1.80 investment.

Windsor plans a short holiday and will spend part of the money "in repayment to various people, relatives and otherwise, who have been kind to me in the past."

It was a big moment for Little Leaguer Gordie Howell of Long Branch, Ont., recently when he received some pitching tips from Bob Feller, former great of the Cleveland Indians. Howell received special attention for pitching a perfect no-hit, no-run game.

Notts Forest and United Boost Unbeaten Streaks

LONDON (CP) — Notts Forest, promoted to the First Division this season, remained in a first place tie with defending champion Manchester United yesterday as both teams ran their unbeaten streaks to five games in the English Soccer League.

Notts Forest, which has finished the same in each of the past three seasons, won yesterday's game, 2-1. Manchester United, 2-0. The two teams, the same as Manchester United, are defeated by Liverpool, winning their third straight First Division League to prove they are still the team to beat.

Local Town moved into third place with a 3-1 win over West Ham United. Arsenal, undefeated until yesterday, was stopped by the special team, 1-1. Middlesbrough and a 2-0 win over 12th-ranked Arsenal with two unanswered goals pasted by Eddie Taylor for the only 2-0.

BURG UNBEATEN, UNITED

Of the 92 teams in English League action, only 17 had a perfect record yesterday. Both of the 10 in division one had kept an unbeaten streak of 100% with a 100% record half to remain undefeated.

The only unbeaten major team before yesterday's play were Southend United, 100% which is 32 to 0. Chester and Hartlepool United division one which are 24 to 0. Chesterfield.

There was no change in the second division leadership with Charlton Athletic relegated last season and Farnham now London clubs, 100% for the top. Charlton drew, 2-2 at Stoke City and Fulham drew, 2-2 with Leyton Orient.

THE MAGDALEN ISLANDS

Pastoral Land Prospers

SANDY, wind-swept, the Magdalen Islands provide the picturesque home for a people renowned for their quaint, old-world ways and their acceptance of a harsh environment. Once they were very poor, these islanders, now they are experiencing an economic resurgence which is bringing new opportunities and an improved standard of living for the 12,000 inhabitants of the slender islands lying in the gulf of St. Lawrence like a big bent fish hook.

They are poor with government assistance, but gradually are learning to harness the power of the wind.

Land is scarce and the islands have no roads. Next to importation of the old mackerel traps, which used to be the chief export for the West Indies, come to some extent in dried fish.

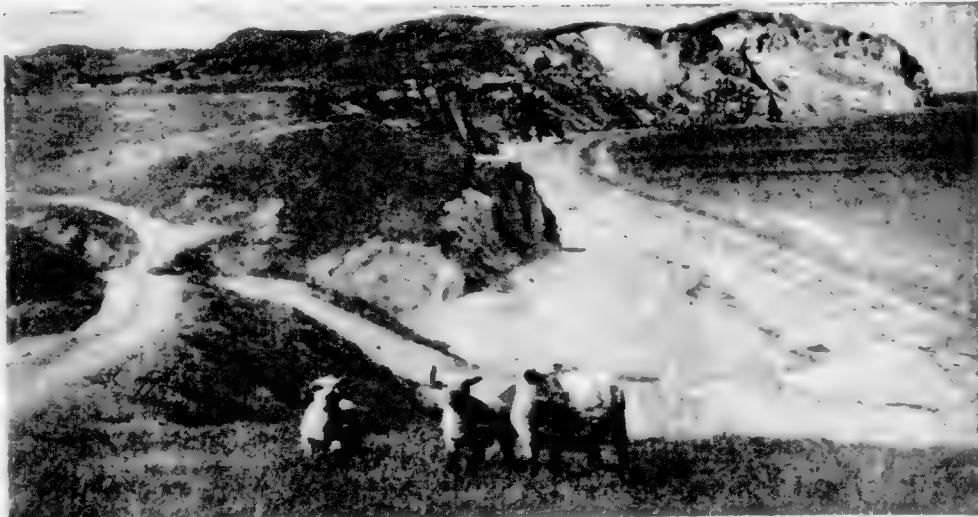

The Magdalen Islands have organized themselves into cooperatives which have branched out into new methods in agriculture, with freezing, canning and fish smoking plants. The fruits of modernization has paid off handsomely.

Once, too, the islanders were content to pass a rare thing to find a customer at the docks. An old sailing boat was even less likely.

Then, suddenly, people discovered the beauty of the island and sought by the river and around the little tourist inns. They came and smacked their lips over feasts of lobster and haddock and salt fish. Delightful. Now, there are restaurants and ship services and the results are a thriving summer trade.

Now, the pristine country on the island of the barren islands, where it was forested but the trees have disappeared along shore.

The trees were used for the timber for their houses. And they needed their pine and wood for their traps and the better part of winter. They have with a past out of the past and the future now is the unknown. There is no longer to be seen in many corners of the Magdalens

This is Magdalen Island, a barren land but beautiful, with great sweeps of white beach to lure the summer vacationist and waters teeming with fat lobster to tempt the gourmet appetite. Once ridden by poverty, the people are now prospering with the introduction of modern methods in their industry and a sudden rush of tourists in the summer months. The people are as picturesque as their island.

have to import their fuel. It's a costly business, so much that they have to charge in future few could afford sufficient to keep their fires high.

Up to four years ago gas and oil lamps provided the only light in homes and schools and things. They are deeply religious. Their simplicity is the source of their charm. And they are as pitiful as their land home in their tattered jackets and fishermen's stockings and caps and cheeks ruddy with the salt wind.

But the people have kept to their old ways of living never the less. They are not primitive. But they appreciate the simple

For the most part the population of Magdalen takes its living from the sea. Lobster are the chief money maker. But cod, mackerel and herring are important, too, and the salt fish products are winning wide renown and new markets. Here are piled lobster traps and some of the lobster docks, built to weather the worst gales the Atlantic can engender.

The Warring Nations Suspected the Pope's Plan
Besides, Each Side Thought Victory Was At Hand

PEACE MISSION FAILS

CHAPTER VI

AS THOUSANDS DIED in the First World War, in an ever widening ring of fire from the Marne on the west to the Pripet Marshes on the east, Giacomo Cardinal della Chiesa, Archbishop of Bologna, was elected Pope, and named himself Benedict XV.

The new Pope was a small, dynamic man. He had 20 years' train-

Even as a youthful papal nuncio Archbishop Pacelli, who was then, was an eloquent emissary. But his peace mission failed to move the Kaiser. And the efforts of Pope Benedict XV, in his efforts to win the Central Powers and the Allies agreed upon was that they should not meddle by the Kaiser.

Benedict placed most of the business of peace in the hands of Monsignor Pacelli.

Then he turned to use the administrative power of the Church to help with prisoner-of-war exchanges. Captives went out from the Vatican to the bishops of all dioceses, in which there were prisoner-of-war camps to see to it that priests who spoke the language of the captives were allowed to contact them personally and to establish communication between them and their families.

Peace began to come back to Pope, of the many wounded among the prisoners who were doing him lack of care. He promptly opened negotiations with the governments to the exchange of prisoners and in turned to us.

In all this, Pacelli worked closely with the International Red Cross and the Swiss Government. Vast quantities of medical supplies were sent to field and base hospitals. Large amounts of food were supplied to the peoples whose homes had been overtaken by the tide of war.

FAINT HOPE OF PEACE

In December 1916, President Wilson had queried the bell gurus as to the terms on which they would consider making peace. With Gasparri and Pacelli, the Pope carefully studied the responses and came to the conclusion that there was sufficient common ground to offer a faint hope of peace. Working closely with Pacelli for several months, he drew up his own peace plan.

The question arose as to how best to present it to the powers of war. The Pope needed to see if the various powers made a good fit of time. The most fitting in an official contact with the Kaiser's government was the Papal Nuncio to King Ludwig III of Bavaria. In February 1917, the Nuncio Archbishop Giuseppe Avienna, died. The Pope decided to replace him with a man who he hoped would be able to get to the Kaiser himself. Pacelli was the obvious choice. His appointment was announced on April 19. Pope Benedict decided to consecrate the new Nuncio Archbishop of Sarles.

On May 13, a little group of spectators was gathered in the Sistine Chapel. The somber little party consisted of the Pacelli family. Eugenio's father, Falipo, had died six months before. They had come to see Eugenio consecrated as Titular Archbishop of Sarles.

Ordinarily, Cardinal Gasparri would have consecrated his subordinates, but Pope Benedict decided to perform the ceremony himself as a special mark of his love for Pacelli.

As the ceremony ended, Archbishop Pacelli, wearing his mitre, the staff in his hand, turned toward his mother, Eugenia. Pacelli, in her widow's weeds, knelt to receive her son's first episcopal blessing.

Archbishop Pacelli wasted no time in starting on his mission. He left Rome for Bavaria on May 20, 1917, taking with him Pope Benedict's peace plan.

The plan proposed the restoration of all occupied territories and provided for discussion of the status of disputed areas such as Alsace and Lorraine.

As a result, the Nuncio was invited to Berlin to confer with ing under Cardinals Rampolla and Merry del Val in the Vatican foreign office, and was, in fact, a career diplomat.

Benedict appointed Cardinal Gasparri Secretary of State, and Monsignor Pacelli moved up to Secretary of the Congregation of Extraordinary Ecclesiastical Affairs.

The Imperial Chancellor, Theodor von Bethmann Hollweg on June 26, 1917, faced a dilemma as he drove through the zombie streets of Berlin directly to the German foreign office. The Chancellor took him at once to his office and himself closed the door.

Pacelli stated firmly the conditions under which Pope Benedict hoped that peace might be made. The Chancellor was worried, almost distraught. He is said to have moaned aloud when Pacelli spoke of the possibility of re-creation of Alsace-Lorraine for France.

von Bethmann Hollweg was out of his wits, but he had just one influence left to urge an audience for Pacelli with the Kaiser.

It took place on June 29.

By October 1917, came to the bitter end of the war.

Archbishop Pacelli, in his uniform of the Order of St. Michael, in his residence, a new spacious palace on the Bremerstrasse directly opposite the Brown House, later the Nazi chancellery, was received by the Kaiser.

He took his place on the floor of the room, the floor covered with a carpet.

He was received by the Kaiser.

He was

Paris Leads Off with the Sack Rome Favors Bag

The high fashion look from Rome is a bit startling to say the least. After the showings by the great houses on Park the name "sack" was given to the fashion look for fall.

It appears now that the Rome showings are over that you have a choice. Obviously you can be a sack but you can also look like a barrel, a box bag, or my god! One thing you won't look like is a normal female.

Following by these pictures of models by adding to it an designer's own figure doesn't count at all. You can happily choose whatever just doesn't. Chianti.

Those creations are called dresses and it fails to fulfill their purpose in covering the body but that is about all you can decently say about them.

Below in an tightly below the knee they are going to make looking a hell of a lot like a barrel and as far as getting along and out of one's own imagination is probably as good as me.

Finally, Opera page of Marion Hubbard affords some dreams of some comfort. It wouldn't be the top notch when you have no room for the weight of 120 a tupper.

Some of the dresses with their puffed skirts after were of some exciting form are shaped like a pinup but the excess of the sleeves at the waist, the belt, the extra fullness, the long, long sleeves over a blouse.

It's according to Elbow the Opera style will not be Velvet this season and the Velvet is here to stay. Velvet with at least a little of Velvet.

Figures in Velvet could do a lot of damage in an advertising book.

Rome designer Alberto Fabbri strips off the figure in a series of three separate gowns with a piece held at the waist. This is one variety of the Box look.

This is the sack or narrow barrel in silk and wool crepe with a subtle touch of Velvet refinement. A hobbleskirt band tightly encircling the legs just below the knee. Fabbri puts bows at waist and knee level probably to feign these points.

The balloon silhouette for late day by Simonetta is in silk shantung, simple above the waist, spherical below. A spray of ostrich plumes, swept to the back, tops the costume.

Intuition Helps Hunch Player Pick the Lucky Winner's Name

By DOROTHY WROTNOWSKI

"There they go," the familiar, exciting starting call, will be heard by thousands out at San down Race Track starting next Saturday. And for the whole day they are going to have a lot of fun even if they don't win any money.

Undoubtedly women will as usual be out in numbers to play the horses. As everyone knows, women are hunch players at the races. They'll arrive at Sandown armed to the teeth with knowledge of past performances, blood lines and an inside "know all" on the jockey's private life. And then they promptly place their bet on a maz because it has a fancy name.

Other hunches beside the fancy name are lucky numbers, the color of the jockey's coat or hair. Hunches also come up front with the long shots. I know one woman who loses fortunes on long shots just because she doesn't play her hunches.

The fancy name is the real leader among the women players. And don't ask me how I know.

Men are apt to scoff and be little this fine example of female intuition but generally speaking they don't win any more money on the horses.

Actually this name betting is not as illogical as might appear at first, as horses' names often tell their parentage. Horse naming is quite an art according to Bob Randal and Harry Filion, officials of Sandown track.

They both claim that A.G. Vachon is the top name for horses. His Native Dancer, a female, has won the most races with wins in every race he has run.

Miss Hamling's son, a male, even before he came into the track, was the first to win.

The names don't always go with performance. Quite a few

Luck Stone and Dark Dancer, owned by Mr. H. R. Milburn, Heslop Street, will be racing at Sandown. In the meantime they are enjoying a bit of rest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Jewell, Beaver Lake Road, where

There won't be any shortage of fancy names to play in the main after the names of racing stars have been chosen. Chilham will doubtless be a favorite.

THE VOICE OF ONE

By REV. DR. FRANK S. MORLEY

Recently I heard a preacher praise Socrates because "he never got angry." How could he forget that Jesus got very angry? So did Paul. Are there not times when not to be angry is un-Christian? Whenever God has wanted something done He has not sent Mr. Milquetoast, but God's angry man. True, He did not send "the terrible-tempered Mr. Bang." Suppose, however, that Wilberforce had never got angry at slavery or Dickens at social rotteness.

The preacher made me wonder. Are not many of the sins we condemn valuable and essential elements in human nature which have been distorted or abused? Are not ambition, pride, tension, self-love, and even gossip good when rightly used?

History tells us that Queen Elizabeth accepted the office of gossip at the baptism of James VI of Scotland. Thus "gossip" comes from the Anglo-Saxon "godisibh" meaning a sponsor at baptism and supporter throughout life. A "gossip" thus would be a press agent of good stories about a man, a spreader of happy, constructive truth.

Or take pride which everybody condemns. Is not pride essential to a good character, a pride that refuses to get into the gutter, that creates the unporchable man, that keeps us from being cowards? Is there not a good pride of race so that Captain Smith as the "Titanic" went down could appeal successfully, "Be British!"

An ancient mathematical instrument was discovered which had been made by a Moslem in India a thousand years ago. On the edge of the fine brass work was carved in delicate Arabic characters, "The work of Hussain Ali, mechanician, mathematician, servant of the Most High God." Would you not like more of that pride of workmanship?

Is Ambition Wrong?

Is ambition always wrong? Has not ambition, rightly used, been one of God's best gifts to men? Jesus exhorted his disciples, "be perfect." Paul was ambitious, "I must see Rome." Washington desired to create in America "something that never existed before." Livingstone prayed, "O God, help me to point this dark continent white." Knox said, "God, give me Scotland or I die."

When she was eighteen Frances Willard determined, "I will spend my coming years in being somebody and in doing something for somebody." Years later she said, "I have been called ambitious, and so I am, if to have had from childhood the sense of being born for a great purpose is an element of ambition. For I never knew what it was not to aspire not to believe myself capable of heroism."

Pope in "Essay On Man" says,

"The same ambition can deserve or save,
And makes a patriot as it makes a knave."

Psychologists deplore ambition too, but is tension altogether bad? Were Gideons in "God's Country and Mine" bitterly criticized the cow-like acceptance of inefficiency. Toynbee says that civilization that rests on its oars has a sad future.

At the eruption of Vesuvius the elder Pliny was calm, "It will be all right," but he was buried with Pompeii in the lava.

We could go on. Paul hated covetousness, but advises, "Covet earnestly the best gifts." Proper self-love is necessary while self-hate is horrible. Shakespeare says,

"Self-love, my liege, is not so vile a sin as self-neglecting."

The impulses of human nature are good when properly directed and used.

Customers, Competitors Battle Over Seaway Tolls

MONTREAL (CP) — A tempest that may lose business to est over tolls on the St. Lawrence Inland channel.

Shipping and business interests from New York to the Canada and the United States.

The toll issue will be aired Monday in Washington, Wednesday in Chicago, and Sept. 19 in Ottawa. The forecast is Seaway interests in both countries will fight it out for no tolls, low tolls, or high tolls.

The Dominion Marine Association, representing most of the 221 Canadian inland freighters confined to the Great Lakes because they're too big for present St. Lawrence canals, wants no tolls whatsoever.

Great Lakes ports, eagerly awaiting a trade boom when most world-class cargo vessels can sail from the Atlantic to Lake Superior, favor low tolls as incentives.

The outcome rests chiefly with six men on a Canadian-U.S. toll committee. Their job is to draft a toll scale low enough to attract business and yet high enough to pay off the $425,000,000 cost of building the seaway, plus the estimated yearly sum of $26,000,000 needed to operate the seaway.

Both Canada and the United States have legislation saying tolls must pay back the seaway cost in 50 years.

Both Canada and the United States will be open to the public on Sept. 19, 1957, to inspect the new tolls.

Beware Codling Worm

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

WORMY APPLES — (C.L., Victoria). It is probably the larva of the Codling moth which is causing your McIntosh apples to fall prematurely. Spraying for this particular pest starts about two weeks after the petals have fallen from the blossoms, and again three weeks later, using DDT.

There is nothing you can do at this time to save the present crop, as the worms are tucked away safely in the apples where you can't get at them. Better not leave any windfalls lying around this fall, and it would be a good idea to get a fruit tree spray calendar from the Provincial Department of Agriculture to guide you in next season's sprayings.

PLANT FOR IDENTIFICATION—

(S.G., Honeymoon Bay). The spray of flowers you sent me for identification is Purple Loosestrife, Lythrum superbum, originally a wildflower found in damp and marshy spots, but it has been developed into a really lovely garden perennial. It does best in rather heavy loam soil in full sun and with lots of water, but it isn't fussy and will usually perform quite adequately in any part of the garden.

Lythrum is a great favorite with the bees, and you'll find them coming from miles around to sip the nectar from the flowers. In addition to your purple-flowered plant, there is a very good pink variety.

To get more plants from your clump you could take cuttings in the spring when the shoots are about 3 inches tall, or you could dig up your plant just when the first shoots are coming through the ground and divide it into smaller pieces, replanting them.

MAPLE LEAF COMPOST—(P.F., Cowichan Bay). A cockney once said there is no such thing as poor beer—only some beer is better than others. You can say the same thing about the different kinds of leaves in compost.

In nature, every kind of leaf eventually becomes compost, then humus in the soil. In garden practice, however, it is best to keep the slow-rotting kinds in a pile to themselves, where they won't hold up the ripening of the main compost heap. Your maple leaves are a little on the slow side, as the tough midrib and stem take quite a while to disintegrate. You can mix them with chestnut and elm leaves if you wish, as these, too, have tough stems.

I have never run any comparative tests on the different compost accelerators such as Adco, Fertosan and Rot-It. So I wouldn't like to venture an opinion as to which is best. Fertosan is a culture of beneficial bacteria, while most of the others are chemical in nature.

DISEASED POTATO — (F.S., Victoria). The blower of potato you sent me was too small to recognize any abnormalities, and I think I could help you better if you were to describe in detail just how your tubers differ from healthy ones.

There was some scab on the skin, but this is only a skin disease and once the potato is peeled, it is perfectly safe to eat. The scab is a fungus organism which infects soil with a good lime content; that is why lime is never applied to a potato plot. Give lime to the portions of the garden assigned to the leafy vegetables and the peas and beans, and grow your potatoes on this ground the following year. In this way, there will be enough residual lime for healthy growth, but not enough to encourage scab.

Lack of humus in the soil is another factor making for scabby potatoes. It pays to dump lots of half-rotted compost or old manure in top of your seed potatoes when planting.

It's Crystal Ball Time

The time has come to haul out the old crystal ball, scrub off its protective coat of dust and fly specks, and survey the 1958 model season.

It looks—as they all do—like a good one.

General Motors is confident of a strong comeback. (GM was never away in Canada, and did well above its Canadian average in Victoria, where Chevrolet held a stand-out lead all year. Second-best seller here: Volkswagen.)

Ford looks to the Edsel (full report here next week) and another big change in Fords to keep it strong in 1958.

Chrysler is counting on its low-slung styling—not too radically changed for 1958—to keep it galloping on the rest of the field.

American Motors is keen on smaller cars, with its Rambler and British-built Metropolitan doing nicely in sales, and plans to bring back the short-wheelbase model Rambler.

Studebaker-Packard is laying heavy stress on its rakish Hawk, feeling that the sports car influence is here to stay.

Most dealers throughout the continent are expected to be in good shape for the 1958 sales race. August sales were better than expected and stocks on hand aren't too heavy.

Shutdowns in the U.S. for model changeover will leave only Ford and Mercury producing steadily throughout September, and they will be among the last to bring out their 1958 models.

About 100 Big Three dealers in the U.S., notably Oldsmobile, have signed up to sell American Motors' Metropolitan and Rambler, as a low-priced line to catch business their fancier cars would miss.

General Motors will be importing its Vauxhall Victor and Opel Rekord models from Britain and Germany for the first time in the U.S., to take its share of the small-car market.

Ford has for some time offering its English Consul and Zephyr on the U.S. market and there's a fair possibility these will get more of a sales push in the coming year.

American Motors, of course, has its Metropolitan, and Studebaker-Packard is now tied in with Mercedes-Benz—neither small nor cheap, but imported and very attractive—leaving Chrysler Corporation the only U.S. builder without a European connection.

There has been talk of Chrysler-making connections with Standard Motors, now in process of being swallowed up by Masey-Harris-Ferguson.

The latter deal probably means Standard will build the radical Ferguson car, which, if Chrysler goes after it, might well end up in Chrysler product showrooms. The 1958 models of domestic cars will run from $50 to $100 more than the '57s, if the expert guessers are right.

Winning Contract

By Howard Schenken and Richard L. Frey

way. Declarer finessed spades twice, cashed his good diamond tricks and led a low heart from dummy, passing the trick to West. What should West return?

West has a pretty good idea of South's hand. Declarer is marked with a good club holding, both by his opening bid in that suit and by the need for some high clubs to round out the requisite points. It is entirely likely that a club lead will give South a free finesse. But it is a finesse that would work in any case and West can see the danger involved in leaving a club in dummy as the communication line to declarer's hand.

Suppose West had returned his "safe" card: a spade. East, who has already discarded one club on the diamonds, must discard another in order to retain his fourth heart. Declarer then cashes the heart king and leads to the heart ace. Now West, who had to let go a club on a diamond, must discard another in order to keep the fourth spade.

As a result, when declarer wins the club finesse and cashes the ace all the adverse clubs drop and his nine spot is good for the last trick.

Foreseeing this, West returned a club when he was in with the ten of hearts. This presented South with two club tricks, but forced him to take them before the squeeze would operate, holding the contract to eleven tricks.
